The sexy, smart and sassy spokemodels of LifeStyles TV Show will be riding in style on Big Dog Motorcycles in a special airing of the wildly popular TV Show in Houston, Texas starting in January of 2005.

Houston, TX, (PRWEB) December 20, 2004 -- The sexy, smart and sassy spokemodels of LifeStyles TV Show will be riding in style on Big Dog Motorcycles in a special airing of the popular TV Show in Houston, Texas starting in January of 2005.

Big Dog Motorcycles is the leader in the high performance, highly-styled cruiser niche and the second largest V-Twin motorcycle manufacturer. "We strive to feature only the best on our TV Show. Big Dog Motorcycles makes amazing machines that inspire the desire to own one." said Nick D'Uva, the Producer of LifeStyles TV.

The popularity of the LifeStyles TV Show has grown exponentially with no sign of slowing. This 30 minute "infotainment" program has smart, sassy, and sexy spokesmodels flying planes, speeding in exotic sport cars, attending lavish parties and charity events, interviewing local celebrities, wearing fine jewelry, dining at the finest eateries, and featuring unique businesses in way that compels the audience to follow suit and buy the sponsors products and services.

"Our clients tell us that there is an immediate increase in the ir business from being on the TV Show," said Misty Rake, an Associate Producer of LifeStyles TV.

LifeStyles is a powerful infomercial for the businesses fortunate enough to be highlighted on this fun show. And yet, LifeStyles is not your average infomercial. LifeStyles looks so much like an entertainment TV magazine that some local program directors have failed to recognize its "paid-programming" status as an advertiser. And, because of the popularity of LifeStyles, local television stations have paid it the highest complement by attempting to imitate its format.
