

Speeding Tickets Cure Via Cdrom

(PRWEB) July 12, 2000 -- Pearl River, NY - Super Software, a multimedia powerhouse founded by 28 year old James Slattery has just re-released a cdrom cure for the most popular American Health problem - lead foot.

Whether you're a casual driver, or your job takes you to great distances via automobile, the cdrom site (www.speedticket.com) claims they have the prevention methods and cures for speeding tickets.

"Our cdrom gives the advice you'll need, before you hit the road, and the information and facts you'll need to gather to successfully beat a speeding ticket. We're not telling our customers to drive fast, we're teaching them how to drive safely and ticket-free." Slattery adds, "Most speeding tickets go un-contested, with fines and insurance premiums as a penalty - after most drivers receive the penalties for their first offense, they're hitting the internet for possible cures."

Fact is, most drivers do speed - and with car insurance rates at a premium, one speeding ticket could cost the average driver several hundreds of dollars over the following years.

"We've interviewed industry experts (read: police officers and traffic offense law experts) to garnish a cdrom full of the best tips and prevention methods. You'd be amazed at how the process of traffic court in most municipalities works - and how easily you can skew things in your favor."

The cdrom's marketing website (www.speedticket.com) claims that the product isn't meant for 100% success, but can often be a $10 cure for a much larger problem.

Media Contact: James Slattery (845)735-0000

Contact Information

James T. Slattery
Super Software

Online Web 2.0 Version

You can read the online version of this press release here.