Los Angeles, CA (PRWEB) April 13, 2016 -- According to an article published March 23rd on NBC Southern California, Los Angeles city councilmembers have announced plans to revamp Los Angeles' busiest downtown sectors to become less hazardous for bicyclists and pedestrians. The author of the article notes that the most significant alteration will be new, protected bike lanes that facilitate cyclists' safety in regards to both parked and moving cars. One of the councilmembers quoted in the article, Jose Huizar, explains that an added benefit of this proposed plan is that, as commuters will feel safe biking instead of driving to work, traffic congestion may lessen as a result. Los Angeles personal injury firm, the Law Offices of Burg and Brock, explains that, because numerous pedestrian-vehicle and pedestrian-bicycle collisions occur each year, this plan is worthy of praise in its aim to make downtown Los Angeles a safer and more livable place.
