Truck Drivers working for T-W Transport, Inc. allege in the recently filed lawsuit that the transportation company failed to pay them for their non-driving activities and allegedly failed to provide proper meal and rest breaks.

San Diego, California (PRWEB) May 12, 2016 -- The San Diego employment law attorneys at Blumenthal, Nordrehaug & Bhowmik filed a truck driver class action lawsuit against T-W Transport, Inc. alleging that the transportation company failed to lawfully compensate their Truck Driver employees for all their non-driving activities, including time spent performing pre and post trip inspections of the company's trucks. The T-W Transport truck driver lawsuit is currently pending in the San Diego County Superior Court, Case No. 37-2016-000130010-CU-OE-CTL. To read a copy of the Complaint, please click here.

The lawsuit filed against T-W Transport, Inc. by the San Diego employment law attorneys at Blumenthal, Nordrehaug & Bhowmik claims that trucking company did not have a business practice that allowed their truck drivers off-duty thirty minute uninterrupted meal periods in accordance with California law. The T-W Transport truck driver lawsuit claims that the failure to provide California meal breaks is evidenced by T-W Transport's business records which contains no evidence of meal breaks.

Further the class action lawsuit alleges that T-W Transport truck drivers were paid on a piece-rate basis. The lawsuit alleges that the truck drivers were not paid all minimum wages to which they were owed because T-W Transport allegedly only paid them for miles driven. The class action claims that the truck drivers should have been paid minimum wages for their non-driving tasks, these tasks allegedly included time spent waiting for Defendant's loads to be ready for transport, among other non-driving tasks.
