

Diminished Value of Georgia Expanding; Hiring Field Inspectors Throughout Georgia.

Georgia's leading auto appraisal company is now hiring new field inspectors.

Atlanta, Georgia (PRWEB) December 31, 2014 -- Atlanta's leading car appraisal company is now hiring new field inspectors to help expand its operations throughout the state of Georgia. Diminished Value of Georgia is currently seeking experienced, highly motivated people to join its service team.

Diminished Value of Georgia is an independent car appraisal company specializing in loss-in-value claims. DVGA's clients range drastically in size, from individuals seeking appraisals for their personal vehicles to attorneys and insurance carriers.

"We're on track to do 4,500 Diminished Value appraisals this calendar year" says Tony Rached, owner and senior appraiser, "we need quality inspectors to help with our expansion" he added.

The field inspector positions are open to candidates with existing automotive experience who are self-directed and motivated.

Responsibilities include: inspecting customer vehicles after body shop repairs and confirming the quality of repair; communicating with clients and collecting documentation; photographing vehicles and analyzing repair estimates.

Applicants are required to have automotive experience in sales and/or repair. They should work well independently and meet deadlines consistently. Applicants should note that this position will not always have regular hours. Applicants must possess a clean driving record, pass a background check, and be able to legally work in the US.

As compensation, field inspectors will receive a flat fee per inspection and are reimbursed for expenses.
