

Travel Sink Invented for Truckers - Designed by InventHelp Client (CCP-1022)

Pittsburgh-based InventHelp, founded in 1984, is submitting the REFRESHING STATION to companies for their review.

PITTSBURGH, PA (PRWEB) July 30, 2016 -- Whether it's for work or pleasure, spending time outdoors can have its drawbacks, particularly if there are no restroom facilities nearby. Long-haul truck drivers are a good example. Fortunately, thanks to an inventor from Joliet, Ill., that is no longer a concern.

He developed a prototype for REFRESHING STATION to allow commercial truck drivers to wash up without having to leave the truck. As such, it is especially beneficial at night and in wet and cold weather. What's more, it is designed to fit inside most tractor trailer truck cabs. It, therefore, eliminates the time wasted searching for a truck stop or other public restroom. It is also suitable for outdoor use in good weather by others who either work or spend leisure time outdoors. Furthermore, it is easy to assemble and use. In addition, it is convenient, effective and affordably priced.

The inventor's idea is job related. "As a commercial truck driver, I spend considerable time on the road with no place to wash up, shave or brush my teeth when washroom facilities are not available," he said.

The original design was submitted to the Chicago 2 office of InventHelp. It is currently available for licensing or sale to manufacturers or marketers.
