Need to ship a bulky piece of your company's machinery to the factory on the opposite coast? Humboldt Storage and Moving, greater Boston's largest United Van Lines agent based in Canton, Mass., recently announced their expanded commercial crating service.

CANTON, MA (PRWEB) March 3, 2004 -- Need to ship a bulky piece of your company's machinery to the factory on the opposite coast? Humboldt Storage and Moving, greater Boston's largest United Van Lines agent based in Canton, Mass., recently announced their expanded commercial crating service.

Now, Humboldt provides custom crate service to both residential and commercial clients. Whether overseas or across the country, Humboldt commercial clients can rest easy knowing that their shipment will be properly packed in a custom crate and shipped to its destination.

Humboldt's crates are designed and built by the company's master crate maker, Abe Bryant, who has been crafting custom crates for over 18 years. The crates are built from solid heat-treated wood and plywood - no slats. After the custom crate has been built to specification, Humboldt movers go onsite to personally pack the precious cargo in the proper kind of protective insulation, such as dolphin foam, secure it and ship to destination.

"Professional packing is our business, whether it's a museum art treasure or delicate commercial equipment, we consider packing and crating both an art and a science. With custom crating, the latest packing materials and tremendous care, we pack and ship items intact anywhere in the world," noted DArcy Goldman, President of Humboldt Storage and Moving.
