

Inventor and InventHelp Client Develops Improved Security System (TST-274)

Pittsburgh-based InventHelp is submitting the GOT CHA to companies for their review and possible feedback.

PITTSBURGH, PA (PRWEB) September 25, 2016 -- "Someone broke into my husband's truck, so I thought about ways to make vehicles more secure," said an inventor from Yuma, Ariz. "This security system not only sounds an alarm, it also identifies the perpetrator so that he or she can be brought to justice."

She developed the patent-pending GOT CHA to safeguard a vehicle from criminal activity. The system is usable to identify and capture criminals. It enhances vehicle security. The invention provides added peace of mind when leaving a vehicle unattended. Additionally, the easy-to-use system is usable to protect hotel rooms, homes and other areas.

The original design was submitted to the National Sales Office of InventHelp. It is currently available for licensing or sale to manufacturers or marketers.
