

Inventor and InventHelp Client Develops Protector for Cargo Hauled in Truck Bed (MWK-144)

A leading inventor service company, InventHelp is submitting the WEATHER TITE to companies for their possible feedback.

PITTSBURGH, PA (PRWEB) October 31, 2016 -- "I had luggage and personal belongings in my pickup truck bed," said an inventor from Kenosha, Wis. "Even though I had a tonneau cover over the bed, there was a leak in one of the seals, and everything in the bed got soaked. In order to provide better protection from the elements, I came up with this truck bed accessory."

He created a prototype for the WEATHER TITE to protect items in the truck bed from the elements. The accessory ensures that the contents of the truck bed remain dry. This provides added peace of mind. The unit features a lightweight design that is easy to fold and store. It can be used in addition to a cap or tonneau cover, or it could be used with an open bed. Furthermore, the invention is designed to be inexpensive and affordable.

The original design was submitted to the Milwaukee office of InventHelp. It is currently available for licensing or sale to manufacturers or marketers.
