Beaumont, Texas (PRWEB) January 18, 2013 -- Sales of pickup trucks have remained strong for Ford, Chevrolet, GMC and Toyota for decades. Since millions of these vehicles have been sold, many are approaching the high mileage point and could require a replacement motor. The RemanufacturedEnginesforSale.com company is now making it easier for truck owners or installation companies to find quality motors for a discounted price. All sales of rebuilt engines for pickup trucks now receive a new 3-year warranty. This warranty is designed to provide the same protection as a new motor would provide from a dealer. Motors that are used in trucks can be gasoline or diesel based. The larger sizes are generally required due to the torque and power that is required for pulling or hauling. The smallest units that are used by Ford and Chevrolet include the I4 series. These are popular in the S10, Ranger and other editions that are still in use by some vehicle owners. The V6, V8 and V10 series motors represent some of the largest made in the gasoline series by top U.S. automakers. The new warranted editions that are now sold online and offline include these variants.

Engine testing equipment is used by some retailers to judge that validity of a rebuild or to verify the actual calibration for each unit. It is these professional tests that are used to raise the quality levels for buyers of secondary market motors. The RemanufacturedEnginesforSale.com company has recently upgraded its testing facility to provide a more advanced way to test for potential damage or OEM part conflicts.

These upgrades have provided the basis for the new 3-year warranty period announced. Each rebuilt motor that is tested with the new machinery helps to prove the longevity after engines are installed.

The Dodge engines were the first to be introduced with an extended warranty program. This was integrated in the fall of last year to test the demand from vehicle owners and installers. The unlimited mileage coverage that was first offered has been extended and transferred into the additional automaker motors now in stock. The coverage period is able to supply labor and OEM parts warranty protection for each unit that is sold online or offline.
