

New Hydrogen Fuel Station Domain Name for Sale as Hydrogen Economy Moves Forward

FuelCellCarNews.com, a global investor news portal for the fuel cell industry, reports it has offered the domain www.hydrogenfuellingstation.com on EBay effective January 28, 2005 for a five day auction.

Point Roberts, WA (PRWEB) January 30, 2005 -- www.FuelCellCarNews.com, a global investor news portal for the fuel cell industry, reports it has offered the domain www.hydrogenfuellingstation.com on EBay effective January 28, 2005 for a five day auction. Hydrogen fuel cell vehicles and the hydrogen stations to support this advancement are becoming more accepted in the industry as evidenced by the hydrogen fuel cell vehicles displayed by automakers at the recent Detroit Auto Show.

www.FuelCellCarNews.com features an article on the future of the sector: "Shell Hydrogen sees the way to 'the Hydrogen Economy'"; featuring an exclusive interview with Shell Hydrogen's CEO Jeremy Bentham, and outlining the forces driving us towards a future fuelled at least partly by hydrogen. Gas-electric hybrids can be seen as an intermediate step towards a full hydrogen fuel cell vehicle, and consumer demand for hybrids is expected to grow sales from 80 thousand this year to 470 thousand by 2007. But Mr. Bentham predicts that fully half of all cars sold could be hydrogen powered by the middle of the century.
