

DKTI Announces Three Campuses Dedicated to Automotive Detailing Training

DKTI announces three campuses nationwide dedicated to automotive detailing training and equipment development - a great resource for the "do-it-yourselfer."

(PRWEB) September 15, 2004 -- The Ding King Training Institute, headquartered in Fountain Valley California, has dedicated three existing campuses in Fountain Valley, CA, Orlando, FL and Springfield, MO to focus primarily on teaching and training Automotive Detailing.

This announcement comes just weeks after Todd Sudeck, President and Founder announced a complete automotive detailing superstore to be constructed that will feature professional supplies as well as outfit the weekend detailer in all of us.

Mr. Sudeck strives to bridge the gap that exists between what is taught to a professional entering the auto detail industry and rumors that primarily make up the "do-it-yourselfer" industry. It is here at their new detail site just launched weeks ago that both sides of the industry can learn and share information that will serve to educate the consumer public. Such real fact topics as, "Really, How often should I wax my car?" and "What is a clay bar?" are discussed at great length.

In fact most do-it-yourself types sign up for the class after realizing how much money can be made in the auto reconditioning arena. For further information contact Allen Oakes at 714-775-9450.
