

New Guide Helps Consumers With Bad Credit Get Their Wheels and Get Back On Track

Consumers with poor credit may think they can't get a car loan. In fact, financing is available from reputable lenders but it's important to follow a few simple steps.

WASHINGTON (PRWEB) October 2, 2004 -- Has your credit score been in a head-on? Have too many accounts left you in a credit crunch? Do you think that means you can't possibly get a car loan? The good news is you may be wrong.

Today, thanks to rapid growth in the bad credit finance arena, just about anybody can get auto financing, according to a new guide from ConsumerAffairs.Com, the country's leading consumer news and advocacy site.

"Consumers with bad credit face steep interest rates, but the loans are available out there," said ConsumerAffairs.Com editor Anne Zieger, the guide's author. "They do have options."

The ConsumerAffairs.Com guide explains how consumers with damaged credit should proceed when they're ready to buy. It explains in detail how to research consumer credit scores, track current loan interest rates by credit category, pick out an appropriate financing source and more.

It also offers consumers a list of shady practices they should avoid at all costs. According to the guide, consumers with bad credit should not:

- Drive off the lot with the car until they have nailed down financing
- Rely on verbal promises as to financing terms
- Accept a loan rate without researching loan rates for their credit category
- Agree to extras such as credit life or gap insurance
- Sign up for a loan with pre-calculated interest without knowing it

Even if consumers do follow the steps outlined in the ConsumerAffairs.com guide (available at http://www.consumeraffairs.com/automotive/good\_car\_bad\_credit01.html), they may still end up with a loan that looks lousy compared to what consumers with excellent credit can get. Zieger says these loans, however, may be a first step toward helping people rebuild a solid credit rating. "If they prove they can make their payments on time, and demonstrate that they're a good credit risk, they may be able to refinance within a year or so," she said.

In the meantime, bad credit car loans may be worth a shot. "For consumers who really need a car, it's good to know that they can at least get in the door," Zieger added. "That should offer them some peace of mind."

About ConsumerAffairs.com

ConsumerAffairs.Com, founded in 1998, is an independent consumer publication. We are supported solely by advertising revenue and do not solicit or accept grants or donations from corporations, foundations or government agencies. We have no business association or ownership interest in any of the products or services reviewed on our site. All of our services to consumers are free of charge.

Contact:

Anne Zieger

(703) 297-6551

azieger@consumeraffairs.com

###

Contact Information*James Hood

ConsumerAffairs.Com Inc.

<http://www.consumeraffairs.com>

202 258-1219

Online Web 2.0 VersionYou can read the online version of this press release here.