

A Toronto truck driver starts a blog

Serguei Dratchev, a Toronto truck driver and freelance writer, registered his own domain and started a daily blog. The blog will feature events and occurrences of interest that happen in his life and in the lives of people Dratchev knows.

(PRWEB) October 4, 2004 -- The 42-old driver/writer says that "when I was growing up as a kid in Russia, I always wanted to be a long-haul driver. I just didn't know that my dream will come true in ... Canada!"

Dratchev, who's also interested in writing and who's self-published a couple of books and booklets for new immigrants, says "this blog might be of interest to people who'd like to know more about:

- * the profession of a long-haul tractor-trailer driver
- * life in Canada
- * life in U.S.
- * the profession of a copywriter
- * what there is to see in Canada and U.S.A. (sights)
- * doing business in Canada
- * writing
- * last, but not least - the English language itself, in its conversational form."

Besides trucking, Dratchev is also interested in learning the art of copywriting. He plans one day to become a self-employed copywriter and shift the focus of his blog from trucking to writing. He holds a degree in education from a university in Russia and moved to Canada from Russia in 1997.

Serguei Dratchev's blog can be found at www.sergueidratchev.com

###

Contact Information

Serguei Dratchev

<http://www.sergueidratchev.com>

416-241-9324

Online Web 2.0 Version

You can read the online version of this press release here.