

How To Get Your Dream Car Cheap

Is it possible to really get a great car cheap? Yes it is, but not in the conventional methods that you might think. There is one method that consumers are turning to more and more to get the car of their dreams at rock bottoms prices.

(PRWEB) October 23, 2004 -- These days, it seems buying a used car for cheap can be a daunting task. With all of the searching through newspaper ads, phone calls, and not to mention scrupulous car dealers, it's enough to wear down the average consumer.

If you've ever had to buy a used car and wanted to get it for cheap, then you know exactly what I am talking about. I feel your pain :-)

That's how it was for me. I had to purchase a car quick and had about 1,500 dollars to spend. I just needed something that would get me from point A to point B. Unfortunately, I didn't have a lot of time on my side so I became desperate.

This caused me to turn to a local mechanic that swore up and down that he would provide me a good deal on a one-owner car. It was an 89 Ford Tempo. 145,000 miles. I went for it. After all, he was a mechanic and said he had put some work into the car.

I'll never do that again.

See if you're in the market for a cheap used car, then there's probably only 3 ways to go about purchasing a car cheap. You can purchase a car cheap from the dealer, but this is not recommended in most cases because, unless you know them personally, most times you get the shaft.

You can also purchase from a stranger off the street, but unless you're a mechanic that knows cars, there's no telling what you're about to get your hands on. Couple that with the desire to want a car and it could make for a bad purchase. You would be getting just that.

A car cheap. And used. (really!) Desperation makes a wise man do foolish things.

But what about getting a good car cheap and used? Is it possible? Of all the ways to purchase a car, if you want to get a car cheap but in good condition, then you should consider going to a car auction.

While this is the best option for most consumers to get more for their money, the problem comes in with knowing where to go to find a good car cheap.
