

Traffic Tickets : How to Avoid getting A Traffic Ticket by Online Internet Traffic School.

Traffic Tickets are Avoidable. Follow these Rules by Internet Online Traffic School and You Won't Get Them. No Defensive Driving Course. No Traffic School. No Insurance Increase.

(PRWEB) October 24, 2004 -- Although we are a traffic school, we want to help you avoid getting traffic tickets. Avoid having to go to a defensive driving course like ours and avoid paying more money on your insurance policy.

First you need to know that there are two major types of traffic tickets -- tickets for moving violations and tickets for non-moving violations. Moving violations include speeding, failure to obey traffic signs or lights, illegal turns, or doing anything else illegal while your car is in motion. Non-moving violations are for offenses like parking your car illegally.

TICKET FACTS: Every year, over 34 million people receive a traffic ticket from a police officer. Most traffic tickets charge fines averaging around $150.00. 34 million tickets at $150.00 equals profits of over $5 billion. The money collected from traffic tickets supports much of our civil service industry, including police officers, accountants, court secretaries, bailiffs, judges, district attorneys, insurance companies, attorneys, and traffic schools like ours at, www.internettrafficschool.com

The number one rule of not getting a traffic ticket is not putting yourself into the position of looking like you should get one. Here are some of the things you should be aware of. Your car's color, modifications, condition, cleanliness, and stickers.

The best way to avoid a traffic ticket is to make sure that nothing about your car draws an officer's attention. Flashy and bright colors, particularly red, draw a person's attention, namely a cop's attention. Light, pastel colors have a tendency to blend with the environment and dark colors like black not only blend in, they look serious. So, if you have chosen a brightly colored vehicle, know that your chances of getting pulled over are higher than the racer in the black car speeding past you. Thus, be more wary about that you are more visible if your car is red.

MODIFICATIONS:

Any additional sound or light modifications can also draw a cop's attention. Neon running lights, thumping sound also mean that with your cool-style points, you will also get more points on your license (the more points you get on your license, the closer you are to losing your license, possibly permanently). And, cops also seem to hate tinted windows. If you don't have tinted windows, don't get them. If you do, make sure you immediately roll all of your windows down the minute you get pulled over. This allows the cop better vision into your car giving her/him more confidence about the situation. When the cop is relaxed, your chances of avoiding the ticket are better.

CONDITION

Cars, like clothes, make can make a good or bad impression. People who take care of their cars look like they're responsible drivers. And a dented car is one that has gotten into accidents before, thus catching a cop's eye better.

APPEARANCE

The cleanliness of your car also makes a definite impression with the cop who pulls you over. Make sure the exterior of your car is clean, but also focus on the interior. Clean out the inside of your car from clutter. Make sure that your glove box is fairly clean so that you don't have to search for your registration.

STICKERS

There are two kinds of stickers that you should really avoid, anything anti-cop or pro-violence. The second kind that are drug related such as dope stickers or Grateful Dead stickers will catch a cop's eye and usually lead them to make assumptions about drug use.

TICKET QUOTAS

Most police departments give traffic tickets on a quota system. This means that there are some times of the month when you are more likely to get a tickets. First, be wary during the first week of a month; this is when the most aggressive cops give out the most tickets. Second, be wary the last week of the month; this is the time when cops who haven't given many tickets are under the pressure to give out more. And on Sundays mornings, because it is easy to give out tickets to people going to church, good people = a smaller chance of getting shot

GETTING PULLED OVER

When you get pulled over, you naturally think to not say anything at all for fear of saying the wrong thing. TALK! Because silence is often an indication of something to hide.

The first thing you need to know is what to call the cop that pulls you. So you need to try to guess the officer's proper title:

If the officer's uniform has three or more stripes, chances are, (s)he is a Sergeant. One or two stripes usually indicates a Corporal. An officer with no stripes but in a State Police car is a Trooper. No stripes and a County car is a Deputy. If you aren't sure, stick with "Officer."

DO NOT treat a female cop differently. Don't say anything to a female cop that you would not say to a male cop.

HOW TO GET OUT OF IT

CRY: If you're willing to try to get out of a ticket you probably deserve, you may have to cry because police tell us that works. But you have to really CRY. Let it all out in a sobbing, hyperventilating, bawling kind of cry. When the officer asks you if you are okay, just say no. Tell him/her that you're scared. Just make it believable. And keep on crying.

BEG: If the cop seems intent on writing you a ticket, tell them you just can't afford the fine. They may at least charge you with a lesser offense than what they had originally planned. Tell the officer that a ticket on your record could impact your job. Or mention that you might get in huge trouble at home for a ticket..

DON'T SAY THESE THINGS:

1. "What's the problem officer?" This immediate response most people have has become a cliché for officers. They hate it.

2. "Was I _____?" (fill in with whatever traffic rule you were violating). A guilty admission from you that you knew you were doing something wrong.

3. "I'm sorry" unless you really mean that you are truly sorry because this usually stands for, "I'm sorry that you caught me."
4. "You just stopped me because I'm _____." Put your race in here. If the cop is racist then this remark isn't exactly going to help your situation and might serve to anger the officer. And if the officer is not racist, then you've just accused him/her of it.
5. "I'll see you in court," This will put the officer on defense and a defensive cop is more likely to give you a ticket.
6. NEVER get out of the car unless instructed to do so.
7. NEVER reach for your pockets or under the seat without first explaining why.
8. NEVER open your glove box unless asked to do so by the officer.
9. NEVER allow your passengers to talk to the officers unless instructed to do so.
10. NEVER consent to a search of your car without first asking for probable cause.

GOING TO COURT:

So none of our advice worked and you are going to court. All is not lost however. Over 95% of traffic tickets are not contested, but that's because people are lazy, pay up or choose to go to traffic school. Naturally, as an online traffic school (<http://www.internettrafficschool.com>) we are biased but going to traffic school is in 90% of the cases your best alternative because it is really hard to win in court. 97% of all traffic court cases are decided in favor of the officer, that is reality. And if you go to court and lose, you can't go to traffic school, your ticket will go on your record and your insurance will go up.

Anyway, slow down, follow our rules and you won't be using us. You will be ticket-free.
