(PRWEB) February 11, 2005 -- First time car buyers, and consumers with spotty credit histories can often be victims of predatory lending when obtaining auto financing. Unscrupulous lenders will often charge high interest rates even when the consumer could have qualified for a much lower rate.

In fact, most consumers with average credit scores can qualify for an auto loan as low as 4.05% APR. Even those with bad credit can qualify for a loan in the 8 to 10 % APR range.

We started <http://carloansez.com> to educate consumers on how to obtain car loans at a competitive rate, and on favorable terms.

We strive to inform auto consumers how to effectively judge their true credit history, and determine the best auto loan they can qualify for. Explanations are given for how the auto loan process works from start to finish.
