Denver, CO (PRWEB) January 18, 2005 -- RideOnTime.com, has facilitated the integration of the ground transportation industry into the online travel market, has announced the appointment of Robert Stevens to the position of Securities Advisor, effective 23 November 2004. In this role, Stevens will strategize the most effective and financially beneficial way for RideOnTime.com to become a publicly traded company should it be deemed appropriate.

Stevens will advise RideOnTime on their financial infrastructure to determine the benefits of an IPO and guide them through the legal components of going public. Stevens will counsel their investment bankers, underwriters and transfer firms upon offering of stock. Should an IPO be fitting, Stevens will be thoroughly involved in the investor relations to protect current and future shareholders.

“I am delighted to have Robert in this critical role,” said Nicholas Chavez, CEO and Founder of RideOnTime.com. “He is renowned in the industry as an outstanding leader and expert in the area of securities.” Robert Stevens has over 20 years of securities experience, and currently owns a transfer agent and clearing firm. Stevens began his career in the 1980s as a retail broker, and has acted in virtually every aspect of the industry including compliance, retail, clearing, M&A and investment banking. “I appreciate the opportunity to contribute to the growth of this outstanding organization as their Securities Advisor,” says Stevens. “RideOnTime is a company that owns an emerging market in the explosive ground transportation industry and I am looking forward to an exhilarating future with them.”
