Denver, CO (PRWEB) January 18, 2005 -- RideOnTime.com, known to have facilitated the integration of the ground transportation industry into the online travel market, has chosen publicly-traded Interland, Inc. (Nasdaq: INLD) as its preferred hosting provider for its ground transportation algorithms. Interland, Inc. was awarded the business over another incumbent national hosting provider. "We had used another hosting provider for our real-time fare engine but when we increased the engines overall functionality, we looked around at other hosting offerings that could better handle the expected demand," says Travis Giggy, Chief Technical Officer of RideOnTime.com.

"We wanted the utmost in physical protection for the code that our partners rely on daily. Interland's Fortune 500 security practices, such as biometric thumbprint scanners, the latest in firewall technology and other security provisions provide us with the confidence that our valued customers and partners need."

Alfredo Narez, director of marketing for dedicated hosting at Interland, says, "We're pleased to have RideOnTime.com as a dedicated hosting customer. Many customers like RideOnTime.com select Interland's dedicated hosting for their mission critical applications because of our high level of security and the strength of our network."
