The Team!

The Portland Jr. Hawks Midgets are a dedicated crew of boys, ages 15 to 18, that hail from around the Willamette Valley, including Portland, Tigard, Sandy, Salem, Corvallis, and Vancouver, WA. They represent their hometowns as part of a team competing in hockey games from right here in the Northwest to as far as Washington, DC. The boys practice twice a week at home and keep their schoolwork on track throughout it all—a key part of the Jr. Hawk's mission.

The Portland association has been around for 40 years, and acts as a channel for local talent to be seen by college scouts. As Head Coach, John McBride, says of the program, "We're helping move players into college through hockey." So far this season, the Jr. Hawks have tipped the scale to 25 wins, 24 losses, and 1 tie, and they're headed soon to a tournament in Salt Lake City, followed by the USA Hockey Regionals in Los Angeles.
