

Interstatehaulers.com Offers Legal Boat and RV Transport Services at Affordable Prices

Is your Boat and RV transport company affordable and legal?

(PRWEB) February 4, 2005 -- Getting your Boat or RV transported can be a hassle if you choose the wrong company. Most consumers do not know DOT laws regarding transport companies. There are many independent haulers out there transporting for hire without the proper authority and insurance. DOT (Department of Transportation) requires transporters to have a minimum of $750,000 commercial liability insurance and $100,000 cargo. All boats that are 9 feet wide or more must have the proper permits for each state that it will be transporting through. If the transporter you hire happens to be pulled over and is not in compliance with DOT, then your item will be impounded. When looking for a transport company, keep in mind that you get what you pay for! "Low ball" quotes are red flags for illegal transporters. It is not worth the risk just to save a few bucks. It may even end up costing you more in the long run. Protect yourself from DOT impounds and fines by hiring a professional legal company. Feel free to ask them for references and insist on getting a copy of their insurance and DOT authority.

Prices in this industry tend to fluctuate with demand for the service. Summer months are considered busy season whereas winter months are considered slow. To save money, you may want to consider transporting during the winter. Prices are based on the mileage from origin to destination and the size and weight of item being transported.
