

Let Me Show You How Women Can Save Time, Earn Money and Live a Life of Success Now

A horrible car accident empowers a work-at-home-mom to share with other women how-to save time, earn more money & live a life of success in her debut book, "Empowering Women to Power Network".

Toledo, OH (PRWEB) February 14, 2005 -- A horrible car accident empowers a work-at-home-mom to share with other women how-to save time, earn more money & live a life of success in her debut book.

Empowering Women to Power Network is a one-of-a-kind inspirational, multi-cultural and spiritual resource-guide that offers tips, tools and steps to empower women to create a power network. A ten-step system, this is one of the first networking books that challenges women to start building a power network from the very first page to the very last. Sabra acts as a guide and cheerleader as she walks the reader through every single step. A motivating chapter for the shy and introverted was added as well. This unique book prompted PublishAmerica, LLP, to offer Sabra a contract after only 12 days of receiving her proposal.

Written in 3 days while in bed, Sabra shares that women can achieve their goals with tips, such as her Empowerment Equation for Success. While still undergoing therapy for her back, shoulder, knee, vertigo and dizziness, Sabra shares her joy to be alive.

At the age of 25 with a Masters in Public Health, Sabra became one of the youngest appointed public health officials in the United States. In just three years, she was published in the nation's most prestigious public health journal, received numerous local, regional, and national honors and awards, and featured in multiple local media outlets. Three years later, Sabra became an accomplished freelance writer, top-producing licensed Realtor®, world-traveler, homeschool mother of three, and profiled in Marquis Who's Who of America & Who's Who of Women. Yet, none of these achievements measures up to what Sabra considers being the most important thing in life—loving and taking care of herself as a woman first.

Happy and healthy women attract other like-minded people to them, described as power people. The instantaneous bonds created through compassion and genuine interest is where the power lies. Power people keep returning to one another's friendship and company, and not just their products and services. This is where a power network starts and how it grows.

As a world-traveler, Sabra explains cultural and religiously-sensitive situations that may occur in this global economy. Sabra offers fun tips to notice and handle uncommon situations with respect.

"This is the best thing to come along since Chicken Soup for the Woman's Soul," I'dok forward to offering this book to all of my Team Women members, says Karyn Fagan the Founding President of Team Women, the world's first women-only network marketing organization.

Planned for a release this Summer 2005, Sabra submitted her final draft on Friday, January 28, 2004. "I'm humbled by the positive response I received during the peer review stage, and honored to be able to help other women. Achieving true balance in my life is not always easy; it's empowering to walk this journey of life with other aspiring women," says Sabra.
