

$2.25 Per Gallon - Just What the Doctor Ordered

Dr. eBay, Certified eBay Education Specialist and eBay expert, has seen enrollment in eBay classes skyrocket, as gas prices increase. Business has never been better, as people quit their 9-5 jobs in record numbers to start selling on eBay.

(PRWEB) April 17, 2005 -- Leading expert, Dr. eBay, Certified eBay Education Specialist and Registered eBay Trading Assistant, has seen enrollment in eBay classes skyrocket and at an all-time high! The higher the gas price, the higher the enrollment and business has never been better.

People are tired of paying an arm and a leg for gasoline and deciding to quit their 9-5 jobs in record numbers, which is creating a whole new generation of eBay entrepreneurs. They can no longer afford to work outside the home with the long commutes and increasing gas prices. Most of them already have everything they need to get started, so for the price of one tank of gas, they can receive professional training from a Certified eBay Education Specialist in the privacy of their home, or at one of 12 local colleges.

Stephanie Inge, Dr. eBay, was the first in the nation to teach eBay classes at the college-level. She has owned and operated a full-service eBay consulting business for six years, which includes selling items for others on a commission basis.

People have hired her to sell everything from cookbooks to Steinway Grand Pianos and business has never been so good, thanks to the high cost of gas! Stephanie is also the founder of the Dallas eBay Seller's group (Dallas eBaybes & eMales), which meets the fourth Monday of each month at 7:00 at the original Chili's on Greenville Avenue at Meadow Road.
