

New Cheap Cars at Online Car Auction, Government Auto Auction and Police Auction

Can the common man get access to public car auction resources not openly available to the public?

(PRWEB) June 20, 2005 -- "Yes he can!" This is possible because there are sources online that have access to public car auction information.

One such source is that of Cheap Car Finder. Cheap Car Finder has been serving 150,000 satisfied members for over 4 years and is a brainchild of Airon Corporation.

Airon Corporation is the leader in online innovation services. Their No.1 goal is customer satisfaction, and their mission is to help their customers buy vehicles for up to 90% off the retail value.

Thousands of vehicles are almost given away every year. Why? Every day thousands of Americans default on their car loans or lease payments. As a result, their new or almost new cars get repossessed by the financial institutions and auctioned off in a hurry, because the cost of storing the cars outweighs the banks' ability to try to make the lost money back. Same with police auctions.

Consequently, lucky people who have access to direct sources where the cars are being sold would find themselves overwhelmed by dirt-cheap offers that look unbelievable to the average car buyer.

Usually, before, only car dealers with a special license could benefit from these incredible savings, however, Airon Corporation has gathered enough information and access rights to be able to let their members to enjoy a multitude of the direct sources where they could find their next vehicle with up to 90% savings off the book value price. This membership is open to the general public.
