Santa Rosa, CA (PRWEB) December 10, 2005 -- The Honda Civic has been named "2006 Car of the Year."

The Civic, which in its newest embodiment offers a smoother and fashionable take on the popular compact car, has claimed the honor of the 2006 Car of the Year from Motor Trend magazine.

All four 2006 Civic models -- the Civic sedan, coupe, the high-performance model called Si and the gasoline-electric hybrid -- were given the award.

Motor Trend editors put the Civic models through two weeks of track testing, performance drives and walk-around appraisals. The magazine chooses its top car based in part on value, standing in its class and significant developments.

"With their bold, contemporary styling and innovative technology, the new Civics are primed for success in one of the most competitive market segments in the country," Motor Trend said in its announcement.

Motor Trend picked its Car of the Year from a field of 28 new models, including the Audi A3, BMW 3 Series, Cadillac DTS, Chevrolet HHR, Dodge Charger, Ford Fusion, Mercedes-Benz R-Class, Pontiac Solstice, Toyota Avalon and the Volkswagen Jetta and Passat.
