

42RE Transmission Now Rebuilt by U.S. Rebuilding Company

42RE transmission is now rebuilt for U.S. parts buyers at the Powertrain Pros company. These automatic gearboxes are part of the Chrysler inventory now presented online for sale.

Chicago, IL (PRWEB) January 11, 2014 -- The Jeep brand of sport utility vehicles often features new technologies created by Chrysler to benefit buyers of vehicles each year. The Powertrain Pros company is now rebuilding one of the popular Chrysler produced transmissions used inside of Jeep SUVs. This company is adding the 42RE transmission in rebuilt condition to its inventory online at <http://powertrainpros.com/42re-transmission-rebuilt>.

This automatic four-speed transmission is based on the original A500 design in Dodge vehicles used throughout the 1980s. The upgrades in 1993 by Chrysler produced the 42RE with electronic controls to improve driver performance. The Powertrain Pros company is now remanufacturing this series of gearboxes to create new inventory resources for parts buyers.

The arrival of this rebuilt inventory online in the Chrysler division of company gearboxes for sale is expanding the amount of automatic units that are now available for public purchase. The 47RE and 40RE transmissions that are also derivatives of the A500 design are now included in the new inventory posted online.

"Jeep remains one of the top selling brands in the United States market based on technologies used in engines and transmissions," said one source at the PowertrainPros.com company.

One benefit that purchasers of replacement transmissions received when accessing the PowertrainPros.com inventory now available is the lengthened warranty policies. Instead of a one-year standard plan for buyers, all warranties that are attached to Chrysler brand gearboxes are extended for up to 24 months in length.

"The new plans for warranties that we are offering do include unlimited mileage after installations are completed for each rebuilt unit," the source added.

The Powertrain Pros company is now featuring the 42RE transmissions inside the online inventory search system located on the company homepage. All inventory numbers have been adjusted for the inclusion of these units and complete price details are now visible when accessing this automated research system.

Transmission replacement buyers can also research the new Chrysler rebuilt inventory offline by calling the toll-free service number at 1-888-292-8807. Costs for shipping, details about transmission purchases and other information is now available through this phone number.
