Columbia Falls, MT (PRWEB) March 12, 2005 -- PLUSS Corporations is an aggressive service company with a sharp focus for finding long-term growth opportunities in the heavy-duty trucking and automotive industries. PLUSS Corporation's Director of Communications, Jeremy Martin, has recently received several honors relating to his expertise in understanding the security business sector. These honors include being awarded member status in the American College of Forensic Examiners Institute (ACFEI), Level III Certification in Homeland Security (CHS-III), and a membership position on the CHS Preparation and Response Team in the ACFEI's Security Engineering and Technology division. The ACFEI is an international membership association, providing a reliable and credible forum for ethical and professional standards for forensics. His designation as a CHS-III is limited to a select group of professionals who have demonstrated, by virtue of their experience, training, knowledge, skill and education, and a total commitment to Homeland Security.

The ACFEI recognized Martin for his 10+ years of experience and training in computer forensics & ethical hacking, as part of their desire to make a special note of the experience and education of individuals engaged in forensic examination and multi-disciplinary training in the individual's field. This underlines the fact that in the security industry, it is essential to have the proper experience and credentials to become a trusted partner to clients and business associates and it validates Martin's expertise in his field. Martin now holds the Information Security industry's top credentials including the CISSP, ISSMP, ISSAP, CHS-III, CEI, CEH, along with several other IT and networking related certifications. Jeremy also writes for several trade magazines and online publications while volunteering his spare time to non-profit high-tech organizations, helping develop industry standards. OEMs, dealerships, and repair shops can rest easy knowing that PLUSS Corporation's Director of Communication is keeping ahead of today's standards in expectation of the future!
